15. Educational aims of the programme:
A joint honours degree is one that allows you to study more than one subject and then combine them into a single qualification. This programme will allow you to explore more than one area of interest and help you to understand a range of key issues, debates and concepts in both of your chosen academic disciplines. The joint honours programme is a particularly good choice if you wish to follow a broader and more flexible programme and keep your future career options open. There will be an opportunity at Level 5 to specialise when deciding which of the two disciplines in which to write your dissertation. The BA (Hons) Modern History with Psychology aims to provide students with knowledge of key events and trends in modern history as well as human psychology. The degree will develop independent research skills and an enhanced ability in analytical and critical thinking, as well as to equip students with the necessary skills required for a career in a wide range of related professions. The programme aims: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> To inspire enthusiasm for the subjects of History and Psychology and appreciation of the past and continuing social, cultural, political and economic importance of these subjects.

- To provide students with a sound knowledge and understanding in the core areas and theories in the disciplines of History and Psychology;
- To enable students to make connections between different disciplines and study areas;
- To enable students to develop independent learning skills and skills for lifelong learning (including literacy, numeracy, written and oral communication and IT skills);
- To stimulate students' intellectual development and powers of critical analysis through the opportunity to undertake independent research using a range of appropriate skills, techniques and methods for investigating History and Psychology;
- To enable the practice and enhancement of interpersonal skills, group working, time management, self-awareness and self-reflection which will enable students to pursue careers in a variety of work environments; and
- To provide students with the appropriate knowledge and skills for relevant employment, including high-order critical, analytic and research skills, and advanced competence in oral and written communication for which the degree is considered suitable or to undertake postgraduate level study.
